Romulus and Remus: A legend about the founding of Rome

☐ The boys lived with the she-wolf for a few years before a shepherd found them. He raised them as his own children, and they grew to be strong and clever.

☐ Romulus named the city Rome and became its ruler. He went up to the sky with his father Mars after he died. And that is the legend of the founding of Rome!

☐ The young men returned to the spot where the shepherd found them and decided to build a city. Romulus drew a line around the city and said, 'Don't you cross this line, Remus. This city is mine!'

☐ A princess called Rhea had a wicked uncle. Uncle Amulius didn't want her to have any children. But Rhea married the god Mars and had twin boys. Their names were Romulus and Remus.

☐ Her uncle discovered the babies, put them in a basket and threw them into the River Tiber. A she-wolf found the basket after it floated to the shore. The wolf fed the babies with her own milk.

☐ They had a big argument before Remus walked over the line. Then they had a fight, and Romulus killed Remus.

Grammar

Markets are places where you can find a bargain.

3  Write a digital Tips for tourists brochure for your town or city.

Finally, the summer was here! Livia, Marius and their parents, Crispus and Cornelia, left the city of Rome to go to their villa in the countryside. As soon as they arrived, Livia jumped down from the wagon and ran to her bedroom. From her window, she could see the garden and, in the distance, the beautiful sea.

Marius, her 10-year-old brother, ran into Livia's room.

'Come on!' he said. 'Let's play charioteers!'

For the next half an hour, Livia and Marius ran around the garden pretending to be the most famous charioteers in Rome.

That evening, Livia and Marius's parents invited some local people to dinner. One of them was a rich businessman named Petronius. He lived in a large villa on the hill. He talked and smiled a lot, but Livia didn't like him. His smile was cold.

Near the end of the meal, they heard voices in the kitchen. Their old cook, Salvia, was arguing with the servants because a huge cake was missing! Somebody, or something, took it!

That night, Livia couldn't sleep. She was worried, thinking about the cake and wondering what happened to it. She got up and looked out of the window. The garden was grey in the moonlight. Then she saw a shape beside a large tree. It was white, like a marble statue. She couldn't remember a statue in that position. She rubbed her eyes and looked again, but the shape wasn't there anymore! Early the next morning, Marius went down to the kitchen for breakfast. He found Livia already there. 'Are you hungry, too?' he asked.

'No, I couldn't sleep.'

'So why are you down here?'

'I want to know who stole the cake.'

'Maybe it was a wolf,' said Marius.

'I don't think so,' said Livia. 'Somebody broke the lock and climbed through the window. Follow me.'

1  1.5 Read and listen to the story.

2  Read and order the events.

- ☐ Livia's parents had a dinner party.
- ☐ Livia found it difficult to sleep.
- ☐ Livia and Marius played in the garden.
- ☐ Livia saw a mysterious shape in the garden.
- ☐ Livia and her family arrived at their villa.
- ☐ Salvia discovered a cake was missing.

They walked out into the garden. Livia remembered the white shape she saw the night before. She ran over to the tree. 'What are you looking at?' asked Marius.

Livia pointed at the ground. There were small pieces of cake!

Livia and Marius walked to the end of the garden and looked over the wall. Livia saw something in the shade of some trees. They climbed over the wall and found a boy sleeping. His hair was red and his skin was as white as milk. Half of the cake was lying next to him. 'So he stole the cake!' said Marius loudly, annoyed.

The boy woke up. His eyes were bright green and scared.

'Why did you steal our cake?'

The boy sat up. 'Hungry,' he said. He knew only a few words in Latin.

Then Livia saw red and purple marks on the boy's arms, and she understood everything. The marks were from metal chains. The boy was a slave; he had obviously escaped from his master. Suddenly, they heard barking dogs. The boy jumped to his feet. Some men were shouting. One of the voices belonged to Petronius.

'Come on! Let's find that boy!'

'We must help him!' cried Livia.

'Come with us,' said Livia to the boy.

Half an hour later, the three children were standing inside Crispus's study. Livia described the morning's events. However, she didn't mention the stolen cake. Then she said, 'Petronius seemed to be in charge of the hunt. I know he's a businessman, but what is his business?'

'He buys and sells slaves,' said her father. 'I think this boy is one of his.'

'Can he stay here?' asked Livia.

After a long silence, their father said, 'Listen carefully. I will buy the boy from Petronius, but you must help pay for him. You'll have no pocket money for a year. Do you understand?'

They understood, and they didn't care. The boy was going to be safe!

'Would you like to stay with us?' Crispus asked the boy. The boy nodded and smiled from ear to ear.

'Have you got a name?' Crispus asked.

At last the boy spoke. 'Yes,' he said. 'My name is Flann. Thank you.'

In the afternoon, Petronius came over for a visit. Crispus spoke to him in the dining room.

'I found him in the garden this morning. He was very hungry, so I gave him some breakfast.'

Petronius was angry, 'Very well,' he said. 'I will sell the boy to you. But don't trust him. He ran away from me. He will run away from you, too.'

Civis Romanus Sum

☐ Do you know what the title means? It means 'I am a Roman citizen' in Latin, the language of the Romans. In many ways, all over the world, we are still Romans today. The world we live in was shaped by the Roman civilisation. Let's look at some examples.

☐ The ancient Romans were fantastic builders. They built arches, domes, viaducts and aqueducts. They also made bricks and tiles out of clay, just like the ones we use today. Another great Roman invention was concrete. Can you imagine a modern town or city without concrete? It's impossible!

☐ The supply of water to houses in Roman cities was very important. Most people collected their water from public fountains. Underground pipes carried fresh water to larger private houses, just as they do today. Other underground pipes took away the waste from the houses.

☐ Lots of roads in Europe today were originally built by the ancient Romans. In fact, they constructed the first international road network. Their roads were usually very straight, so people could travel as quickly as possible. The surface of the roads was convex so that rainwater would not form puddles. And because the roads were also paved with stone, they could be used in all kinds of weather.

☐ In the 1700s, political revolutionaries in France and America wanted a new system of government with no kings or queens. They fought to form a democracy, a government ruled by the people. They looked to ancient Greece and Rome as models for their new governments. Today, the USA has a senate and senators, just as the Roman republic did over 2,000 years ago.

Michelangelo

1  Read and complete the poem.

Michelangelo was an artistic genius. He lived 500 years ago, but his work is still admired today. He painted the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel in Rome between 1508 and 1512. Before he started, he didn't know anything about the technique of fresco painting, but afterwards he was an expert! He hated the physical pain of looking upwards all the time. He wrote a poem complaining about it and said 'I am not in the right place, I am not a painter.'

Michelangelo preferred to work as a sculptor. His most famous works are the marble statue of David in Florence and the Pieta in Rome. He sculpted them before he was 30.

He was also an architect (he designed several buildings including the dome in St Peter's Basilica in Rome), an engineer and he wrote lots of poetry, too! He was considered to be the greatest living artist in his time and even had a biography published while he was still alive. He knew Leonardo da Vinci, but they were not friends. In fact, they didn't like each other at all!
