

Simon Kelly is 11 years old. He lives in a lighthouse at Wahroonga point in Australia. His parents look after the lighthouse. It's fun living in a lighthouse. Simon loves living next to the ocean.

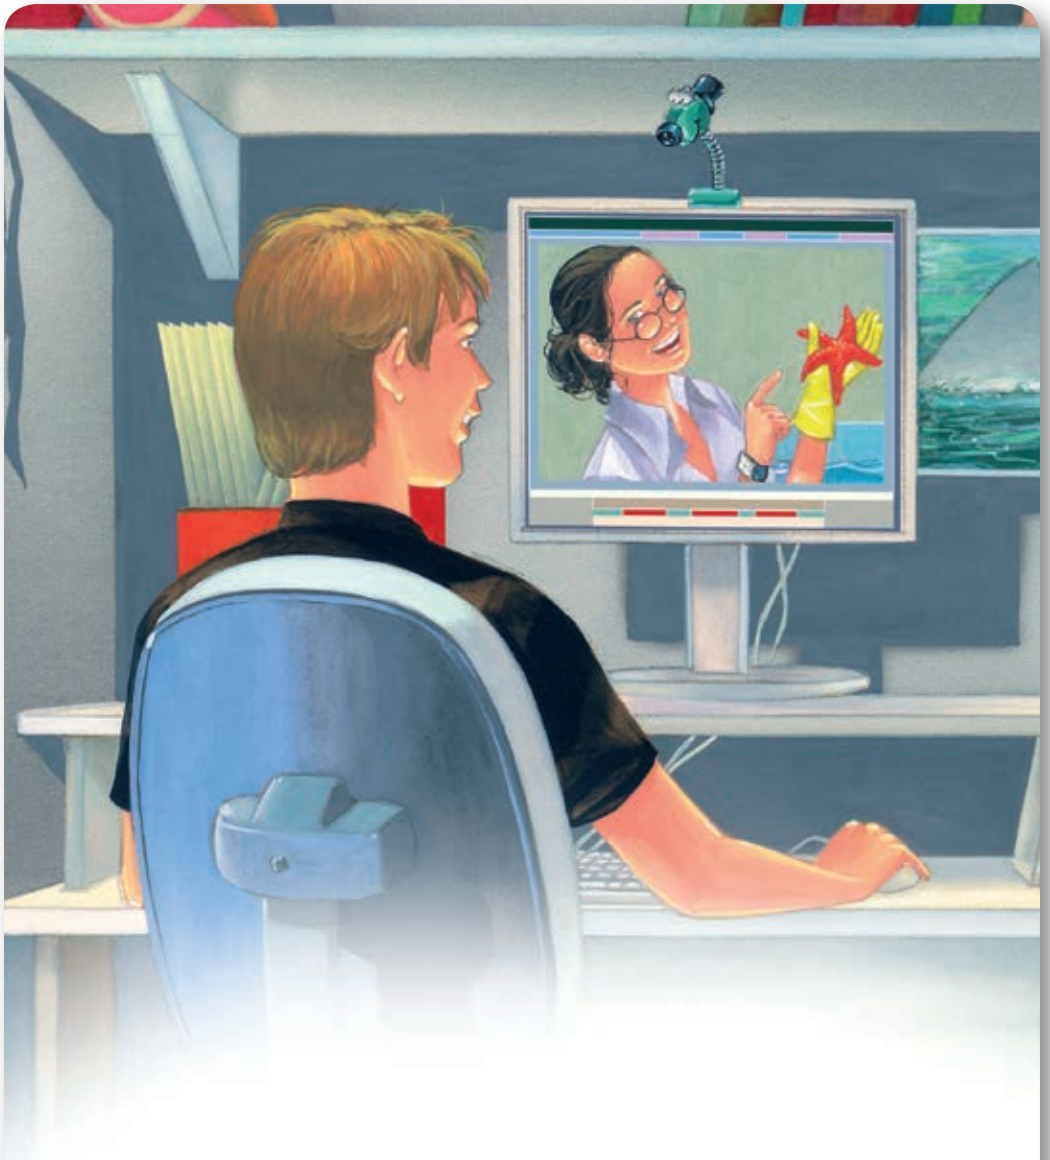

The lighthouse is 50 kilometres from the nearest town, so Simon doesn't go to school. He does all his schoolwork on his computer. He talks to his teacher via webcam every day. He sends his schoolwork to her by email.

Simon's hobby is marine biology. When he finishes his schoolwork, he goes to a big rock pool near the lighthouse with his camera. He films the animals that live in the rock pool. He's an expert on anemones and crabs.

Professor Morgan is a friend of Simon's. She's a marine biologist at Melbourne University. Simon and the professor often meet on the internet and talk about the animals in the rock pool. Simon's got his own website about ocean animals.
