Underline in blue: Most families throw away around 30% of the food they buy. This causes environmental problems and is also a waste of money. For these reasons, we need to be careful when we buy food. Here are some easy ways for you to reduce your food waste.

Underline in orange: If you don't make a list of what you need before going to the supermarket, you will probably buy more food than you need.

Underline in pink: Some experts suggest that you take a picture of what is in your cupboard before you leave home, so you don't buy food that you already have.

Underline in green: Most food packages have an expiration date, and it's usually not safe to consume the food after that.

Underline in brown: It's important to check the expiration date of any food before buying it and only buy what you can consume before that date.

Underline in purple: When we plan our meals, we only buy the food that we need to prepare them.

Underline in gray: Planning our meals is also a way to have a more balanced diet and, consequently, live a healthier life.

Underline in yellow: Start saving food today! Remember that when you save food, you save money and help the environment.
